

aiki-Balance

> a holistic and integral approach to wellness, agility and openness of body, heart/soul and mind/spirit
for the personal and social life

Since 1994 I have been intensely practising Aikido (since early beginnings also as teacher - currently at a level of a 3rd Dan), in my 'home-dojo' Yamatoka with Ursula Reimer in the context of the SJV (Swiss Judo and Ju-Jitsu Association) and several, mostly Kobayashi (OSAKA) based schools, later on within the CAA (California Aikido Association - AIKIKAI + IWAMA) with Frank Doran, Pat Hendriks, Robert Nadeau, who finally guided me to Miles Kessler (Tel Aviv) and Patrick Cassidy (Montreux) - and the younger association of EAC (Evolutionary Aikido Community - AIKIAI).

"Evolutionary Aikido" understands this "marshal art" as a holistic and integral approach to conflict resolution, which follow very basic principles:

- Recognizing conflicts, as they are - not as I judge and imagine them
 - Meeting energies (aggressions) where they come from - not only where they show effects
 - Accepting conflict energies openly and transform them - not repelling and fighting
 - Taking conflicts as opportunities, in order to learn and develop positive from them
 - Basis of every conflict-resolution is an inner connection with what encounters me !
 - Crucial is less what I do, but if and how I penetrate into the core of the matter / situation
 - Solutions evolve out of the resolution of inner 'delusions' - in myself and my surroundings
- For this it can be helpful to learn - understand - practically internalize techniques; techniques may grow to important means for critical situation, in order to connect with their core; only this connection will free an adapted solution (with fewest losses) for the specific situation.

My today's aikido practice under the title of "aiki-Balance" is actually concentrating in body work implementing refined aiki-principles for caring and developing inner and outer abilities in all the parts and layers of our body, including heart/soul and mind/spirit aspects. In order to further develop these training and treating methods I completed my knowledge in the fields of QiGong, Hojo, Mindful Meditation (to some extent Respiratory Therapy, Eutonie etc.) and additionally by completing an apprenticeship in Coaching with a Master of Coaching (CAS/ECA).

All in all "aiki-Balance" is creating and offering a holistic and integral approach to wellness, agility and openness/awareness for our body, heart/soul and mind/spirit - for our personal and social life.

By an extension of these principles into our environment with plants, animals and nature/life in general, and based on many years of practice, a new emphasis has grown, revolving around a partnership-based approach and handling with "Tree and Garden" (Individualistic Plants in a human designed life space).

Thus my current activities - and offers - are mostly revolving around various different approaches to a holistic (connected/committed) dealing with myself - with my counterpart - with all of us - with us in the world; - various different approaches, which - oriented towards the whole - open up to personal space and orientation - health and agility for the individual.
